Description:

Public Safety Crowd Management is designed to provide the knowledge, skills, and abilities (KSA) for first responders and security personnel to manage large gatherings of people congregated inside or outside of a building or critical infrastructure. It was first piloted in the City of Indianapolis in preparation for the National Football League's 2012 Super Bowl. The subject material was well received by the first responder community and documented in a follow-up course assessment in which 96% of the participants highly recommended the course be shared with other professionals in the industry to establish a standard for crowd management as a precondition to crowd control.

This course supports the goals and objectives of the Office of Domestic Preparedness (ODP) emergency responder guidelines, ODP Homeland Security Guidelines for Prevention and Deterrence, NFPA 1600, 5.9.1-5 National Module for Incident Management (NIMS), Homeland Security Quadrennial Report (QHSR), Recommendations in the 9/11 Commission Act of 2007, Presidential Policy Directive 5 (PPD-5), DHS Stadium Guide 2009, Presidential Policy Directive 8 (PPD-8), and best practices and lessons learned from practitioners in the field with extensive experience in managing large crowd situations.
